Navy Details Historic Solomons Victory

MARINES HOLD KEY BASES IN PACIFIC ISLES

Japanese Expected To Battle Bitterly To Prevent More Expansion.

LOSSES THOUGHT LIGHT

Enemy Bombs Port Moresby, Forces Allies Back in New Guinea Interior.

(By United Press)

GENERAL M'ARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia—United States naval and marine forces won a historic victory in the first phase of the 12-day Solomon islands battle, dispatches indicated today.

A navy department announcement at Washington that the shore positions taken by the marines had been developed and were now well established was believed to mean that the United States forces held all key bases in the southern Solomons which they set out to seize.

Japan was expected to fight bitterly to prevent further expansion of the American footholds, and if possible to rewin the areas which the marines have taken under the guns and planes of the Pacific fleet.

But there was belief as well as hope that the marines were in the Solomons to stay until they and the Allied troops of Gen. Douglas MacArthur start northward to oust the Japanese from the South seas.

The Washington navy communique and dispatches from the South Pacific fleet headquarters of Vice Adm. Robert Lee Ghormley left little doubt that thousands upon thousands of marines were now in the Tulagi-Florida-Gavutu - Makambo - Guadalcanal area of the southern Solomons with tanks, artillery and plentiful supplies streaming to them through a protecting lane of American and Allied warships, under an umbrella of United States Navy planes.

A dispatch from South Pacific fleet headquarters in New Zea-

3 Injured In Auto Crash, Cycle Mishap

Mansfielders Hurt When Car Hits Utility Pole On Route 30.

Two Mansfield residents were injured seriously last night when their automobile crashed into a utility pole after hitting another car on U. S. Route 30, just east of Mansfield. Another motorist, a Bellville motorcyclist, was injured this morning when his cycle capsized after striking a hole in the highway north of Bellville.

Staff Sgt. Edward V. Dune, 21, of 118 South Foster street, driver of the car, suffered a fractured skull in the auto accident while Mrs. Janice L. Gale, 21, of 185 West Third street, a passenger in the car, received a severe arm laceration and cuts about the face. Dune was reported to be in "fair" condition today while Mrs. Gale's condition was said to be "good."

State highway patrolmen said that Dune, driver of the car, struck the left rear of another auto operated by Edward P. Kinkel, 21, of 411 Ohio street, while attempting to pass it. Out-of-control, Dune's car then plunged across a ditch and struck a telephone pole which was broken off by the impact.

Stationed at Morgan field, Ky., young Dune was home on a three-day leave. He was recently promoted to staff sergeant.

At the time of the accident, the two were returning to Mansfield after taking some friends home.

Clarence Weaver of Bellville, an employe of the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, received a broken collar bone and other injuries when thrown from his motorcycle after it struck a shallow hole in the pavement on State Route 13, one mile north of Bellville this morning.

Besides the fracture, Weaver received multiple bruises and scalp lacerations. Hospital attendants gave his condition as "fair."

Patrolmen said that Weaver had apparently lost control of his vehicle when it struck the hole in the highway. According to patrolmen the road had been "blown up" by heat at the point and highway workmen had cleared out a hole about an inch deep to be filled up with new concrete.

DUE FOR HONOR

Former Gilead Youth To Be Given Heroism Medal.

Sergeant Robert G Lee, former Mt. Gilead youth, will be awarded the soldier's medal for heroism for his rescue of two companions from a burning army transport plane which crashed Saturday night near Peru, Mass., the war department announced today.

Lee, whose family resides in Columbus, was seriously burned in the fire which followed the crash of the big army transport in an isolated section of the Berkshire Hills.

His condition was reported "fair" today at a hospital in Pittsfield, Mass., where he was taken with the two soldiers he rescued from the plane debris, Privates Alonzo L. Pearson of Windber, Pa., and James Fern of Abingdon, Va. They were reported "about the same" today.

Seventeen of the 20 men in the plane lost their lives in the crash.

LONDON — (INS) — Reuter's (British) news agency today picked up a Vichy radio broadcast reporting that three 4-engined American planes "of the Halifax type" and four twin-engined "Hudson-type" craft had landed at Gibraltar yesterday "from the direction of the Atlantic."

The planes are expected to resume their flight eastward today, Vichy said.

Gable Jumps From Bunk at 5 A.M. To Begin Army Officer Training

He's Minus Mustache and Wearing Government Issue Clothes.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Clark Gable, without his mustache and considerable hair, jumped out of his bunk at 5:15 a. m., today and began the grind of classes, drill and study that will make him an army officer and probably a gunner in a bombing plane.

Informed upon enrolling that regulations forbid anyone less than a second lieutenant to sport a mustache, he promptly went to a barber shop for a close shave.

Gable grinned when told he must shave off his mustache. "Suits me," he commented. "It'll probably be a lot cooler anyway."

He told newsmen and photographers that he had been wearing the mustache for "about eight years."

A sergeant tossed him his uniform. Gable took it, held up the somewhat wide pants to his waist and looked about quizzically.

"They'll shrink a little bit—and so will you," the sergeant told him. Gable grinned again.

He had received most of his allotments when a soldier handed him a pink toothbrush.

"Ain't that a beaut?" the movie star laughed, holding it up to Andrew J. McIntyre, Hollywood cameraman who enlisted with him.

After receiving his "G.I." (government issue) olive drabs, Gable carefully stuffed his belongings into an army duffle bag. Then, the broad-shouldered star threw the bag over his shoulder and, turning to McIntyre, called:

"Let's go, soldier."

Officer-candidate Gable said he had no future plans except to become a good soldier.

"I suppose after the war I will go back to Hollywood and pictures," he replied. "But right now I have plenty to do and think about. And you know you can't do two things at once."

Gable did not appear bothered at the prospect of having to arise daily at 5:15 a. m. and work until dark. He said he believed he was in "pretty good shape" physically.

His first training at this "streamlined West Point" was in

City's Legion Post Praised For Part In Scrap Campaign

While McVey post of the American Legion in Mansfield completed plans today to turn the big German gun at the Legion home on Park avenue west over to the county salvage committee, Dr. Charles Copeland Smith of the National Association of Manufacturers praised McVey post for its prompt action in giving the gun to the war program.

Dr. Smith, who has spoken a number of times in Mansfield, addressed the Ohio Legionnaires at their state convention in Canton, urging the Legion to lead a nation-wide movement to convert guns of the first World war into steel for this war.

Informed by Sam V. Fox, McVey post commander, that the post here probably was the first in Ohio to give up its souvenir gun of the first World war, Dr. Copeland said:

"Tell Mansfield that a city set on a hill cannot be hid. The fine example set by Mansfield will be followed by every Legion post in every Ohio city. Until now, so much of our scrap collection effort has been futile because many people doubted the earnestness of our leaders.

FDR GETS BILL

Senate Passes Measure For Quick Dependency Payments.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Legislation to permit immediate payment of living allowances to dependents of service men awaited White House consideration today.

The senate approved the house measure yesterday but postponed action until Thursday on another bill to permit members of the armed forces within the continental United States to cast absentee ballots for federal offices.

The dependency measure eliminated a provision which would have prevented any payments until Nov. 1. The allotment law, effective June 1, allows a private, first class private, corporal and line sergeant in the army and their counterparts in the other armed services to allot $22 monthly to a wife with the government adding $28. Funds also are provided for support of children and other dependents.

Richland Youth Was In Sub Japs Depth-Bombed 100 Times

A Richland county youth who saw service in four major Pacific sea battles in which his submarine was depth-bombed more than 100 times, was home today on furlough.

He is Nelson Reel, 18, of Lexington R. D. 1, a machinist's mate, whose submarine participated in the battles of Midway Island, Coral Sea, Java and Macassar Straits.

Under water most of the time during those fights, Reel's greatest thrills came from depth bomb attacks which, he said, would cause the submarine "to lurch sometimes as much as 20 feet."

On Christmas eve, 34 depth charges were dropped near Reel's submarine, and 27 more were dropped on Christmas day. There were others dropped on other occasions but "none of them did any damage," Reel said.

The sub fired 12 torpedoes

County Draft Call In September To Be Largest So Far

Calls for the largest contingents of draftees to leave Richland county since induction began were received today by the county's three selective service boards with the men ordered to go to Cleveland from Sept. 17 through Sept. 22 for physical examinations.

It will mark the first time Richland countians have been called to Cleveland for their physical tests. The examinations have been given in Columbus. The men who pass their tests will go to induction centers two weeks after their examinations.

Board 1 in Mansfield sent a large group to Columbus today for examinations for the August call which is slightly below last month's total. The Board 3 contingent will be examined Thursday in Columbus. The Board 2 group also will be examined this week. Selectees examined this week will not go to camp until the first week in September unless they request immediate induction.

The first contingent of 20 navy recruits is scheduled to go to Cleveland Wednesday from Mansfield. Others will go the following day. Several of the navy enlistees had been ordered by their draft boards to report for examinations tomorrow and Thursday, and when they enlisted in the navy they were required to report for induction the same days the army called them.

OPA STUDYING WAY TO SOLVE MEAT PROBLEM

Plans Three-Point Program To Avoid Outright Consumer Rations.

'SHORTAGE' HIT

Meat Dealers Point to Bumper Supply as U. S. Weighs New Allocation, Price Plan.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON —The Office of Price Administration is considering a three-point program to solve the meat distribution problem and prevent regional meat shortages without resorting to consumer rationing, it was learned today.

Officials said the plan could not be put into operation unless the agriculture department reverses its opposition to placing of ceiling prices on livestock.

The program, still highly tentative, would include:

1. Strict control of "on the hoof" livestock prices. Processed meat prices already are controlled.
2. Federal allocation of meat products on a nationwide basis.
3. General "readjustment" of consumer prices ironing out present regional inequalities, but retaining the present overall level.

As OPA officials worked out details of their program, members of the agriculture department's foods requirements committee scheduled a meeting today to consider another plan to regulate the distribution of meat supplies. Agriculture officials also were hopeful that consumer rationing could be avoided.

But speaking in Chicago yesterday, Roy F. Hendrickson, administrator of the Agricultural Marketing administration, warned of the "probability" of rationing and said there would be a possible shortage of 3,000,000,000 pounds of meat "in relation to the quantity of meat civilian consumers would buy at ceiling prices."

Other officials said some 11,000,000,000 pounds would be sold

STRIKE FEARED

CIO Warns of Walkout In Aluminum Industry.

PITTSBURGH—(INS)—The war-vital aluminum industry rumbled with threats of strike today as the CIO-Aluminum Workers of America balked at last week's war labor board decision which denied their request for a blanket $1 a day wage increase.

International President N. A. Zonarich, of nearby New Kensington, said the board rejection "endangered the whole aluminum production program," and demanded either immediate reconsideration of the union's appeal or presidential intervention if a strike is to be avoided.

"The aluminum industry is now confronted with demands from the rank and file for a general strike," he warned. A walkout would affect 32,000 aluminum workers. Zonarich said all local union officials involved in the dispute have been summond to a Pittsburgh meeting tomorrow.

FORCE SALES

Mobs Make French Farmers Sell Potatoes to Them.

VICHY —(AP)— A newspaper in the unoccupied zone reported today that mobs of week-end visitors overwhelmed gendarmes in the potato-growing center of Villagers-Bretonneux and forced farmers to sell them potatoes under threat of pillaging the farms. Three farmers were fined 5,000 francs each for yielding.

Police attributed the invasion to a rumor that potatoes would be sold without ration tickets.

Hitler Seeks to End War This Year With Negotiated Peace.

LONDON —(INS)— Hitler hopes to end the war this year by knocking out Russia and then forcing a compromise peace with the United States and Great Britain, an Istanbul dispatch to the Daily Mirror reported today.

This was the impression of a Turkish press committee just returned from a tour of Germany, the Istanbul dispatch said.

Germans Fall Back In Fight For Stalingrad

Russians Admit Enemy Drives Dangerous Wedge Into Red Army Line In Don Bend And Moves Ahead In Caucasus But Steel City Stand Strengthens.

(By Associated Press)

Russia's armies were reported to have driven the Germans into retreat below Stalingrad today, recapturing several miles of lost ground in the critical struggle for the great Volga steel city, and elsewhere in the global war signs appeared that the Allied star was rising.

Soviet dispatches said Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's forces, launching one of the strongest counter-attacks since the Germans crossed the lower reaches of the Don, had generally improved their positions in the Kotelnikovski sector, 95 miles southeast of Stalingrad.

Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, said Russian shock troops stormed enemy-occupied hills, captured a defense section hurriedly erected by the Germans, and destroyed several firing points.

The Russians admitted that Gen Fedor von Bock's offensive had driven a wedge into Soviet lines northwest of Stalingrad, but front-line dispatches to Izvestia, the government newspaper, said Red army infantry, artillery and tanks "fulfilled their order to halt the enemy by all means" in that sector.

Other reports said a Russian "descent group"—parachutists or plane-borne troops—landed in the German rear, beat off attack by Nazi planes and soldiers, and killed 300 Germans in a two-day battle.

Simultaneously, Adolf Hitler's field headquarters acknowledged that the Red armies were attacking German lines west of Moscow and noted "hard defensive battles" in the Vyazma and Rzhev sectors, west and northwest of the U. S. S. R. capital.

While the Russians hurled back the invaders about Kotelnikovski, Soviet headquarters conceded that the Germans had cut a threatening new wedge into Red army lines in the Don bend below Kletskaya, 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad.

A communique also acknowledged fresh Nazi gains in the western Caucasus as Axis troops forced two more crossings of the Kuban river in the Krasnodar sector.

Far down the Caucasus, where German flying columns have driven more than 250 miles along the Rostov-Baku rail line toward the Grozny oil fields, the Russians said their troops "waged defensive operations and repelled an enemy attack" in the Mineralnye Vody region.

Meanwhile, Soviet newspapers urged the United Nations to carry the war to Germany "with all their power and energy" and declared that Hitler "already

NEW PHASE: Stalin-Churchill Talks Indicate 'Multi-Front'

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Britons expressed belief today that the Churchill-Stalin talks last week initiated a new phase of the war which would swing the United Nations into a multi-front offensive that could end only in Germany's utter defeat.

Prime Minister Churchill, flown to and from Moscow with British and United States officers in three four-motored American bombers, himself messaged Premier Stalin "I am certain that our contact will play a useful part in furthering our cause."

A Pravda dispatch broadcast by the Moscow radio said the result of the conversations — which W Averell Harriman attended as the representative of President Roosevelt—was a "great political defeat for Hitlerite Germany."

Official announcements said the decisions concerned the "war against Hitlerite Germany and her associates in Europe"—a phrase specifically omitting Japan.

Secrecy veiled the details, but the tabloid Daily Sketch said "the final decision must have been made" on the question of establishment of a second European front in 1942.

The historic Kremlin conferences, the smooth execution of first of the promised daylight raids on Nazi-occupied Europe by United States bombers and indications that the Solomon islands offensive was progressing well all helped to show the start of what the British regarded as the victory trail after almost three years of defensive fighting.

The BBC, in an English broadcast said the joint Moscow-London announcement "inaugurates

PLEDGE: Brazil Promises Move After Sinking Of Five Vessels

BULLETIN

RIO DE JANEIRO—(INS)—All Brazilian ships on the high seas were ordered back to the nearest port today and all coastal sailings cancelled as anti-Axis feeling mounted to a high pitch throughout the country following disclosure that five Brazilian vessels have been torpedoed by U-boats in the last few days with probably heavy loss of life.

(By International News Service)

RIO DE JANEIRO—As survivors were landed from a torpedoed Brazilian ship, one of five sent to the bottom in the past few days by Axis submarines, the government today advised the public to remain calm and gave its pledge that "these crimes against Brazilian lives and property would not go unpunished."

Survivors were landed during the night from several lifeboats, but their number was not announced. Nor was the identity of their ship made public. A government statement denied a report originating in Montevideo, Uruguay, that 700 to 1,000 were aboard one of the vessels.

The transport carried only a small contingent of troops and "contrary to rumor, loss of life was not great," the statement declared.

Responsible officials remained close-mouthed about the sinkings, the rescue work and Brazil's possible action in retaliation. No one would comment on a prediction in diplomatic circles in Buenos Aires that Brazil would declare war against the Axis within 48 hours.

The vessels attacked and sunk by the Axis U-boats were the 4,800-ton Baependy which was serving as a troop transport, the

Unprinted Clippings From My Memory's Scrap Book:

MILDRED and Maurice were featuring their "Dance of Death" at Sam Salvin's Sun and Surf club. Mildred, draped in white chiffon and barely discernible in a purple spotlight, was tossed around by Maurice, a five-foot-two version of death. One rainy night when business was off the kid singer on the bill sneaked into Mildred's costume and turned the dance into a riot by doing hilarious acrobatics with Maurice. She was called on the carpet after the show and saved her job only when she promised "never, ever, to do anything funny again. Two years later she quit night clubs for movies. Her name: Martha Raye.

Our first important night-club job in New York—at Meyer Horowitz's Nut club in Greenwich Village. The Ritz Brothers had the habit of dropping in there to try out new routines before an audience. No salary for this, of course, but no fine either. The hired performers didn't like it—the Ritz brothers stayed on so long that it meant missing the usual late subway home. Grace finally corrected the situation with an idea she got from the trio's standard opening gag. They always slipped off their shoes and socks at their ringside table and made their entrances barefoot. Grace merely took up a collection from the entertainers and bribed a waiter to put mashed potatoes and gravy in the Ritz Brothers' shoes while they were doing their act. P. S. They never came back.

Our first New York show—a chance to make good on Broadway. But please let the revue forever remain nameless. I was sharing a dressing room with Bob Hope on the break-in date in Atlantic City. "Funny routine you do," Bob told me after the opening. "Reminds me of my first show. I did a dance in which I squirted water all over my partner. Very funny, really too funny, the same as yours—the producers cut it out before we reached Broadway." He slapped me knowingly on the back.

The next night, Bobby Connelly cut out our dance!

Came our next Broadway musical, "Red, Hot and Blue," and Bob Hope was playing with us again. As in the earlier show, he always talked about the same thing backstage—he knew he could be a hit in pictures if Hollywood would only give him a chance. "I'm the perfect Jack Oakie type," was always his tag-line. Just before the show closed, Louis Shurr rushed to him with a picture contract from Paramount which Bob signed immediately. He told us that night: "The part was written especially for Jack, but he doesn't want to do a picture now—so they want me!" "Then you are the Jack Oakie type!" Grace exclaimed.

"Oakie, nothing," said Hope, "this part was written—for Jack Benny!"

Sitting from midnight to morning with Jack Oakie at our first Hollywood party. It was a birthday celebration for Dolores Del Rio, William Powell and Jack Warner. "How did you like working with Charlie Chaplin in 'The Great Dictator?'" Grace asked him. Oakie thought a minute, then answered: Chaplin? He's the best straight man I ever had.

Our first engagement at the Palladium in London. Our encore was a satirical magic bit in which we burned a hole in a handkerchief then tried unsuccessfully with magic potions to eliminate the hole. Val Parnell cancelled us after the first show because of that trick. "Sorry, old fellow, but we don't bring artists all the way from America for that," he explained. "It's no trick, you know; any one can do it." It was a new switch—manager makes magician disappear.

The day Jack Bertell, our manager, told us he had discovered a new star—a chanteuse. He hadn't signed her up because he didn't know how to speak French. He thought we could help because we had danced in Paris. We wish we had taken a chance and shared his commission. The little French chanteuse was Hildegarde—from Milwaukee!

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — Another side of Hollywood:

The sweet-faced, white-haired little woman walked across the RKO lot, and she nodded pleasantly to the red-haired girl in make-up approaching.

Coons

After she had passed, the little woman turned around.

"Ginger Rogers," she said. "I know because I ironed that dress this morning."

IT HAPPENS this way often for Mrs. Katharina B. Ruge, an alterations fitter in the studio's wardrobe department. "Alterations fitter" is a rather all-inclusive term, but convenient for union classification. Mrs. Ruge's job includes the general care and repair of various items of wardrobe used by the players. She mends, sews, alters, washes, irons, cleans, keeps track of things, dyes.

She has been in her "corner"—a little room with racks of dresses, dress forms, an ironing board, stocking-stretchers, a sink, sewing machines, boxes of thread and needles—for eight years. More than 60 now, she has been sewing since she was 17, and has been in studio wardrobe work 15 years and more.

Most of her work now is with wardrobe for extras, stand-ins, minor players—especially in comedy and westerns. In her "corner" today is a white net evening gown, sparkling fresh, which has been in service, with constant mending and cleaning, for 10 years.

Mrs. Ruge would recognize Ginger's dress, though not Ginger, because she has a "terrible memory" for names—"and besides the make-up makes them all look different. The girls come in here, and I know them, but for the life of me I couldn't tell you their names. Lucille Ball I always know, and Anne Shirley—because they come in to say hello now and again, and I know them real well."

BORN in Germany, she came to New York at 15, moved to Chicago where she began sewing. Widowed at 30, she took it up as a profession, came to Hollywood 24 years ago and began a profitable business, her clients including several movie people who led her eventually into studio work.

Union scale for her job is 90 cents an hour, time and a half for overtime. She works five days a week, 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Occasionally she is assigned as a "regular" fitter, for which her scale becomes $1.35 an hour. She was laid off this year for one month—first time in her eight years at RKO.

She lives in her own five-room home, five minutes on the bus from the studio, with her widowed daughter who works in a business firm. She is a victory gardener and buys a War Bond each month. Her hobby is gardening and birds—canaries and parkeets. While her daughter does the "inside" work, Mrs. Ruge does the "outside"—"I even mow the lawn," she says proudly. She seldom has time for movies.

WLB Gets Big Steel, CIO Wage Dispute

FDR EXPECTED TO ORDER U. S. PLANT SEIZURE

Boston Machinery Company Virtually Refuses To Obey WLB Order.

BULLETIN

BOSTON — (U.P.)—Faced with the threat of government seizure and operation by presidential order, the S. A. Woods Machine company announced today it "would stand pat" on its refusal to comply with a War Labor Board order.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt is expected to order government seizure and operation of the S. A. Woods Machinery company, Boston, Mass., today unless the company decides at the last minute to comply with a war labor board order.

The company, in a telegram to the board last night, virtually declined to comply with the order—granting union members a maintenance of membership contract and calling for establishment of arbitration machinery. It would affect 650 employes.

The telegram, sent to WLB public member Wayne L. Morse, contended that "there is no reason why we should be called upon to surrender the rights of American citizens." The company said neither union maintenance nor compulsory arbitration had anything to do with production in its plant, but that "we shall cooperate in production to the fullest extent permitted us whether we or the government operate the plant."

The telegram was a reply to one sent yesterday by Morse to H. C. Dodge, president of the firm, accusing the company of "dilatory tactics" tantamount to a "management strike against the government." The company had appealed for a delay in compliance with the board's order pending a court test of the board's powers.

"Unless the board is advised by 2 p. m. tomorrow, Aug. 18, that the company is prepared to comply immediately with the board's order in this case, the board will be forced to refer the matter to the president for such action as he deems appropriate," Morse told the company.

It would be the second plant within a week that the president has ordered seized if the action is ordered. Last week the navy took over the General Cable company, of Bayonne and Perth Amboy, N. J., and is now operating it. That was seized because workers went on strike and refused to obey a WLB return-to-work order.

FIGHT LOOMS

Bennet, Mead Factions Square Off For New York Prize.

NEW YORK — (AP) — A floor fight for the prized New York Democratic gubernatorial nomination—the first in 20 years—appeared a possibility today on the eve of the party's state convention in Brdoklyn.

There was a chance, however, that opposing factions would agree on a single candidate at a conference called for tonight before the camps of U. S. Senator James M. Mead, who has the blessing of the White House, and State Attorney General John J. Bennett jr., candidate of State Chairman James A. Farley, assemble for battle.

In the background, Republicans, almost certain to select former New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey as their candidate at their convention next week, looked on with satisfaction at the Democrats' interparty squabble.

NEWSMEN WILL TELL OWN STORY

Scheduled To Testify Before Grand Jury On Midway Battle Report.

CHICAGO—(INS)—Managing Editor J. Loy Maloney and War Correspondent Stanley Johnston of the Chicago Tribune were to appear before the federal grand jury today at their own request in the government's investigation of the Tribune's June 7 story on the battle of Midway Island.

The inquiry, ordered by Attorney General Francis Biddle, seeks to determine if the story, which estimated the size and make-up of the Japanese fleet the American navy had defeated, disclosed confidential information in violation of the amended espionage act of 1917.

Johnston and Maloney visited the office of William D. Mitchell, Biddle's special assistant, yesterday to make a personal plea that they be heard by the grand jury before it concluded its deliberations.

ORDERS MARION RENTS FROZEN

OPA Also Includes Gallipolis In Order Fixing Mar. 1 Level For Cities.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The office of price administration ordered residential rents in the Marion and Gallipolis areas in Ohio—"frozen" at the March 1 level, effective Sept. 1.

"Federal control of rents is working," Administrator Leon Henderson commented. "In the 96 areas where we made maximum regulations effective in June, July and August, the rent index has shown a sharp drop. This decrease percentage rise has been as high as 11.8. This means a tremendous saving in the nation's rent bill. It means a complete stabilization of one of the most important items in the cost of living."

Henderson said the new action "might be termed a move against high rents in areas containing ordnance plants." Almost half of the areas have plants of this type.

The March 1 rents will apply except when the accommodations have been substantially changed by a major capital improvement. Such improvements include the addition of a bathroom, completion of a room in the attic of a house, or installation of sidewalks where there had been none before. Ordinary repair and maintenance is not considered a major capital improvement.

Under the regulations, all landlords are required to register their rental properties. There will be a registration for houses, apartments, flats, tenements and similar dwellings, and another for rooms in hotels, rooming and boarding houses, trailer and auto camps, tourist homes and cabins, and similar living quarters.

The registrations must be completed by Oct. 16. The exact dates will be announced locally. Rent directors will be named by the first of the month, OPA said.

Board Modifies Earlier Order On Immunization

A Mansfield board of education order requiring pupils in the city's public schools to be immunized against diphtheria will apply only to pupils under 12 years old.

The board at its meeting last night modified a former order which included all pupils, to make it necessary only for the younger boys and girls to be treated with toxoid.

The action was taken at the suggestion of Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, who told the board in a letter that younger children react better to diphtheria toxoid without ill effects.

"In the case of a child over 12, we believe that the child's personnal physician should decide as to whether immunization should be done," Dr. Wild said.

There was no action taken by the board regarding pupils past 12 years old. Pupils below that age, however, must be immunized before they will be permitted to start to school on Sept. 9.

The Legionnaire found Walton at the Union station, worrying about making the correct transfer of trains at Crestline to get to Columbus. "Don't worry, old pal," said the Legionnaire, "We boys stick together, World war I or 2, I'll see that you get your right train." Walton, who lives at 55 Micah place has been called up from reserve for active duty.

HEARS ORAL ARGUMENTS IN CASE TODAY

Board To Seek Quick Decision on Amount of Pay Boost Due 300,000 Workers.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The U. S. Steel corporation and the CIO United Steelworkers of America go before the war labor board today to argue the amount of wage increase due nearly 300,000 employes of "big steel's" five operating companies.

With the factual record made in the "little steel" case accepted as a basis of consideration, the board indicated it would seek a speedy decision by hearing oral argument one week after the big steel case was certified.

Negotiations broke down over the union's demands that U. S. Steel grant the same concessions ordered by the board in "little steel" a month ago—5½ cents an hour increase, retroactive to February.

The corporation contended that only 3.2 cents of that was allowed under the board's stabilization formula, and that the additional 2.3 cents was granted as a special consideration because the "little steel" dispute was certified nearly three months before the president called for stabilization of wages.

U. S. Steel asserted such special consideration was not applicable in its case because there was no dispute until the first week of August. For the same reason it argued no increase could be made retroactive earlier than the first week of August.

The union contended the long-standing practice in the steel industry of effecting the same wage adjustments generally about the same time was on its side.

The union's contracts with the steel companies permitted either side to reopen them on 20 days' notice. The union said that was not done in the case of big steel early this year because of its expectation the little steel decision would be accepted as a precedent and the increase would be made effective throughout the industry.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — All pre-primary differences between Democratic Chairman Ray T. Miller of Cuyahoga county and John McSweeney, Democratic nominee for governor, were patched up today.

Miller's organization supported Walter F. Herr of Columbus for the gubernatorial nomination in the Aug. 11 primary.

Last night McSweeney, who was nominated over State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson by the heavy vote he polled in Cuyahoga county, received warm praise from Miller.

"We have been fighting on different fronts," commented McSweeney, making his first public appearance here since his nomination.

"Now there are no breaches and no wounds, only a united democracy marching upon a common enemy to a common victory."

Urgent Call for More Scrap Metal

THE CAMPAIGN to salvage scrap metal is entering a more intensive stage as wartime needs make the demand greater than the supply.

The call now is for a thorough combing of all possible sources of scrap metal, in large or small quantities, and the Richland county quota is 1,500,000 pounds a month for the remainder of this year.

Sale can be made to junk dealers, if in quantity to justify, or scrap metal can be donated to some organization which will use the proceeds for the benefit of service men.

Articles mentioned as being suitable for reworking into needed war materials include: Old flatirons, discarded lawn mowers, vacuum cleaners, sewing machines, bath tubs, metal buckets, cook stoves, obsolete corporation seals, unwanted souvenirs of other wars, old fire extinguishers, electric fans, refrigerators, metal ash trays, bed springs, brass and copper screens, wornout radios, metal toys, burned-out electric cords, aluminum pots and pans, and broken tools.

Not only will homes and farms from which accumulated junk is removed be benefited thereby but a patriotic purpose will be advanced. Every ounce of available scrap metal is needed by American industries and many small contributions will make an amazingly large total.

Diagnosis of Detroit's Ailments

JUST AS a major operation is sometimes required to cure the ailment of an individual, frank diagnosis and drastic treatment are occasionally necessary in overcoming community weaknesses.

Such is the case with Detroit, which seems to have been too close to itself in recent years to realize just what has been happening there.

So a writer and photographer for Life magazine proceeded, in last week's issue, to apply x-ray and stethoscope to that city and to disclose a number of badly diseased spots beneath the fair surface.

The pages devoted to this presentation were deemed improper for Canadian reading and were ordered torn out of copies sent across the border.

But the Detroit News said editorially: "It is a harsh indictment. To much of it Detroit must plead guilty, for the events mentioned are matters of record. The cure? The only cure is solemn realization of the truth of the sentence: 'For Detroit can either blow up Hitler or blow up the United States'."

Detroit's deplorable record of graft in public office and connivance of law enforcement officials with gambling racketeers was lightly touched on in the article, with emphasis placed on lack of co-operation between employes and management in turning out war materials.

Both Mayor Edward J. Jeffries and R. J. Thomas, president of the United Auto Workers, CIO, contend that the story was much overdrawn. "Scurrilous," the mayor called it, and Thomas declared "there is a definite common purpose between labor and management in Detroit to maintain all-out war production."

Now that the diagnosis has been made, and the condition of the patient revealed, it will be up to the family and friends to decide whether home remedies will suffice or whether it will be necessary to resort to surgery, with Uncle Sam as a consultant.

Only Criminals Protect Criminals

WHOEVER in Butler knows the identity of the miscreant who has been damaging property of a school board member, and who withholds that information from the authorities, is almost equally guilty, as responsibility for revealing the perpetrator of a criminal act rests upon all law-abiding citizens.

The stigma which school children place on "tattle tales," who "tell on" youngsters who indulge in juvenile pranks, does not legitimately carry through to protection of adult wrong-doers, else the processes of orderly government would be seriously handicapped.

Only in criminal circles, for self preservation, is there a code which makes "ratting" or "squealing" the most despicable of offenses.

Richland county commissioners have offered a reward of $200 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for recent acts of vandalism and intimidation in Butler.

With or without such an incentive, good citizenship demands that the identity of the perpetrator—or perpetrators—be disclosed to authorities and proper criminal action taken.

Strange Behavior In Germany

AS EVIDENCE that the Nazis are in trouble on the home front, people in Berlin are now engaged in the peculiar procedure of burning apartment houses. They are not alien saboteurs, but Germans burning German property. So serious is this trouble said to be that the government is offering rewards of 2,000,000 marks for the arrest of the offenders.

It would be easy for outsiders to make too much of this, and of other reports of abnormal events in Germany. But it may be that a wave of hysteria is sweeping that country, as a result of deferred hopes, personal and family privations, the upset of normal life and inability to see any end of war.

Such events may be connected, by some freak of psychology, with the growing recklessness of people in the conquered countries of western Europe, as they strike back at their oppressors. Despair turns to bold sabotage, regardless of consequences. It seems somewhat like the beginning of revolution, with a strain of madness in it.

Those prayers for rain, frequent in other seasons, were unnecessary this year, as—from all reports—the matter was looked after without reminder.

Why Axis Minimizes Successes

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Propaganda students are noting that Moscow gives more publicity to the Germans' successes on their Russian front than Berlin does.

Possibly the Nazi command brags adequately for home consumption but it isn't boastful in its broadcasts to the United Nations. In fact, it almost seems inclined to minimize the extent of the progress that Axis forces undoubtedly have made into Soviet territory. The Kremlin, however, appears anxious actually to emphasize the seriousness of the situation from the Allies' standpoint.

But military men don't interpret this as indicating any excess modesty on Adolf Hitler's part or undue alarm on Josef Stalin's.

They think it represents sound policy in both cases.

It's well recognized that what the Muscovite chief commissar wants is more help than he has been getting from Uncle Sam and Britain. Notably he is anxious for that second front's creation against the Nazis—and Fascists also, though they don't matter so much. Hence the urgency of his warnings to Washington and London that there is danger they will be too late unless they act very speedily.

Contrariwise it is more than doubted that Fuehrer Hitler is desirous of the establishment of a west front against him on the European continent, at least until he has the Soviet folk effectively disposed of. Assuming that supposition's correctness, it is understandable why he prefers to avoid hurrying up a new front, prematurely for his own purposes.

Goebbels "Dares" Us.

The continental eastern front having been suggested in spite of him, Nazi Propagandist Joseph Goebbels, his publicity director, did, indeed, put out a recent invitation to the United Nations to come ahead and try it, asserting that the Axis countries were loaded for bear against just such an emergency and would welcome it, for the fun of slaughtering the invaders wholesale.

That unquestionably wasn't intended as genuine encouragement, though. All experts agree that it was a bluff, with an Axis view to scaring the threatened invasion off if it could be managed.

The dope is this:

A European continental invasion from Britain and America, would be right down Hitler's alley, were he confident of his ability to demolish it in short order, as Goebbels said he could.

It would be so for the obvious reason that, the invasion having been attempted and fizzled, Russia naturally would fold up and quit without further argument, a German-controlled Europe would flatten out permanently. Italy would not amount to anything, Japan could be attended to later, China would go flooey, the Western hemisphere would be licked and Adolf would be left sitting on top of the heap indisputably.

Statesmanship, militarists, psychologists and all others are puzzled by Hitler.

Hitler the Enigma.

Originally Hitler didn't appear to signify a nickel's worth. Julius Caesar, Napoleon and the rest of their ilk were of some caliber initially. Adolf didn't have any "beginnings." He hadn't any ancestry or any education or anything appealing. He isn't personally likable, according even to German accounts. For that matter, he isn't even a German, but an Austrian, and his real name isn't Hitler.

When Hitler broke into the situation he was a mere nubbin in comparison with Duce Mussolini. Now Mussolini scarcely rates the job of Hitler's office boy.

Hitler is a record-breaking human curiosity.

It's in international politics and warfare and history that he figures today, but in subsequent centuries, he ought to keep students puzzling over him.

Hitler can be squelched in our time but that won't extinguish him as a world's wonder on into the ages.

That west front's a guess for militarists. They know best.

Problem for Doctors.

West Milford, N. J., which once had 2,500 inhabitants and now has 3,500 and a summer population of more than 15,000, has lost its one doctor to the army and has petitioned the selective service to exempt him. Since it is agreed that a single physician cannot care for more than 15,000 patients effectively, it follows that even in normal times West Milford was medically shorthanded. The town's plight is not unique. Similar conditions prevail in most of the 286 industrial areas recently surveyed by the United States public health service.

Unless the medical societies come to the rescue and formulate practical plans to relieve what is already a crisis, the federal government may have to draft and allocate physicians.

Thus far organized medicine has contented itself with appealing to physicians to join the army and navy and offered no plan to meet the civilian crisis. An unusual situation demands unusual remedies, even though they mean a departure from tradition. — New York Times.

"Rome Was Not Built In a Day"

About the year 1546, there was published the earliest collection of English "sayings."

John Heywood, its author, must have had an ear for posterity; for, included in the list are many aphorisms that, though they must have been in circulation before their appearance in this work, have an up-to-the-minute flavor.

Among them is "Rome was not built in one day," a thought which was not novel, but which was the first recorded utterance of this testimonial to the cumulative-achievements of efforts and patience.

All-Out Aerial Offensive Awaits Co-ordination of Bombing Planes

—By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

THE PRESENCE of Brig. Gen. James H. Doolittle and the continuing conferences between British and American air force commanders strengthen belief that the United States is preparing to join the British in an all-out aerial offensive against Germany.

It was announced last week by Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, commanding United States air forces in the European theater, that our bombers soon would be in action against Germany.

A problem has arisen, however, which may have to be straightened out before the two air forces can be co-ordinated for unified action.

The British have raised the question of the suitability of American Flying Fortresses and Consolidated Liberators for night bombing operations of the type used so successfully by the British against Germany. The British object that the American planes, while among the best in the world, are not adapted to the specialized kind of work involved in blasting heavily-defended German industrial centers by night.

Specifically, the British say the American bombers are not as fast or as well-armored as the British Lancasters or Stirlings, nor do they carry a sufficient bomb load for this particular task. The British planes carry about eight tons of bombs and the Americans about three.

THERE is no question of friction or disagreement. As the aviation expert of the London Sunday Times expressed it, "plain speaking is needed in the common cause."

The British are advancing what may prove to be a workable solution. It is that the American bombers be turned over to the British for vital duty over the Atlantic, to which they are adapted. In turn, British heavy bombers designed for use against Germany would be taken from the Atlantic and given to the Americans to operate.

The problem does not appear insoluble. What the British are aiming at is to get the maximum results in return for the planes and crews that must be sacrificed in the all-out effort.

The results the British have been getting have been due in large part to the weight of bombs they have been able to drop on a single target in a single night. The new British two-ton bombs, called "block busters," have accounted for much of the destruction accomplished in raids on such cities as Mainz and Duisberg.

SOME interesting light is cast on these bombs by the air attache of the British embassy in Washington, just returned from London. He pointed out that such bombs are not limited in weight to the two tons now in use. We may look for a steady rise in the weight and explosive force as plane construction progresses, he said, adding that it is a matter of weight distribution in the plane rather than the total weight of the individual bomb.

The "block busters" differ from standard construction in that they are very thinly cased. The minimum covering gives the maximum explosion. Because of the thin casing, the bombs do not penetrate the surface of the target but burst on impact. It is therefore not the fragments but the explosion itself that does the damage.

The main force of the bombs is lateral, giving a spread-out explosion of terrific power which flattens everything within a wide radius. They will knock down buildings hundreds of yards away, by air displacement.

Their most effective use to date was at Dusseldorf on July 31, when 150 of them were dropped, devastating four square miles of war industries.

The attache gave the essential factors in such raids as the bomb tonnage the planes are capable of carrying and the explosive power of the bombs, rather than the number of planes. He reported that the Dusseldorf raid was more powerful than the earlier one on Cologne, although only about 600 planes took part, as against more than 1,000 at Cologne.

Watching Trends

WASHINGTON—"Air raid" in the senate:

It is one of those off days and there is only a scattering of senators in their seats or wandering in and out of the cloakrooms. There is a handful of newsmen in the press gallery. The public galleries hold perhaps 150 persons.

So faint that it almost is no noise at all, the sound of a siren drifts down through the skylight. Business drones on. Senator Smathers, in the presiding officer's chair, is calling for reconsideration of a bill already passed. An assistant sergeant-at-arms runs in and whispers in the ear of Majority Leader Barkley.

The senator is on his feet so quickly he scatters papers on his desk: "Mr. President, if there is nothing further, as in legislative session, I move that the senate adjourn until Monday next."

That faint siren sound was the second and final air raid alert. It is 2:59. The senate is three minutes behind the air raid schedule.

THE exodus begins. The Capitol elevators already have stopped running. The stairs are jammed as wardens and deputy wardens (all Capitol or Senate employes) guide the lines of senators, pages, clerks, sightseers, newsmen and Capitol spielers through the north door and out across the plaza.

The line wavers as it emerges from the air-cooled Capitol into a surging wall of Washington heat, but the wardens hustle it along. It's a city block to the basement of the Senate office building.

Across the Capitol Plaza to the east, there is no sign of activity in the U. S. Suppreme Court building. We wonder why for we know that the supreme court is sitting. We find out later. The supreme court, deep within the thick walls of its marble edifice, was unable to hear the alarm. They probably wouldn't have adjourned if they had.

But now we are piling into the "air raid shelter"—a basement hallway of the Senate office building. The air conditioning has been shut off and already the packed hallway is warming uncomfortably. The last of the stragglers move into the shelter and the doors are closed. It has taken 14 minutes for the senate side of the Capitol to get to their shelter—enough time for bombers from beyond Baltimore to reach here, drop their eggs and scoot for "home."

The senators seemed unruffled, Sen. Elmer Thomas moves about, immaculate as ever, and apparently as cool. Senators Vandenberg and Danaher stand chatting in a doorway with Minority Leader McNary. Even in an air raid, the Republicans stick together. Senators Taft and Byrd are wandering restlessly through the crowd.

The visitors caught in this Capitol show, love it. It's as close as a lot of them have ever been to a senator. Some stand and gape and thrill.

Then the "all clear" sounds. The senators go to their offices. The clerks and the newsmen go back to work. The sightseers rush off to write letters home.

Man About Manhattan

Defender of Art

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—A ten-ballon sombrero is not too much to take off for famed Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, the Russian gentleman who conducts the Boston Symphony and makes propaganda, early and late, for living composers both American and otherwise.

Dr. Koussevitzky said, quite a spell back, that "art must die last in a war."

Summers, the good doctor has been wont to conduct the most plush and perhaps most successful of all summer music festivals—the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood, which is a great estate in the southern reaches of Lenox, now the property of the Boston Symphony. The festival well under way, he insisted on founding also a music school like no other in the world. This he called the Berkshire Music Center, and the idea was to give young professionals the best in advanced instruction, and to allow amateurs to sit in with them, and pick up the crumbs. The crumbs made a full meal.

THIS spring, however, the Berkshire festival was called off on a hint from the government. Then Dr. Koussevitzky's chin went out.

He called together his friends, and announced that he would not give up — would they help? He called together his newspaper friends, and asked the same question. Both groups said yes.

The school went on, cut about 100 from last summer's level of 360 students. Then the doctor announced a festival, using the student orchestra instead of the Boston Symphony. This meant that the people who would attend must take Dr. Koussevitzky's word for the quality of the performances, and the old, veddy, veddy social atmosphere would no longer make going to Tanglewood "the thing."

None of the 3,000 persons who took the first concert on faith will ever forget it. Some were so hoarse, from cheering they couldn't even talk much about it. It rained for the next concert, or the audience would have been doubled. It has grown since.

ON the stage of the flatiron-shaped music shed were 105 young musicians, nearly as many girls as boys. They looked bright and . ining, even before the doctor entered proudly and picked up his baton. He played a Haydn symphony—No. 88, if you're interested. The audience sat in stunned silence when it was done, and the yelling began.

He played the third "Leonore" overture, and there was more shouting—it sounded like the old days of national political conventions. Then, after intermission, came Dmitri Shostakovitch's Fifth symphony. It's modern music, it's typically Russian, but it's full of tunes.

THE music swept off the stage like a cavalry charge, and you could see the audience strain to keep its seats.

First result was increased activity at the box office; the doctor stands to lose several thousands, but it won't be as bad as it might. Second result was a great increase in society's interest. Third result was a surprise to everybody.

It was a remark I must have heard fifty times in an hour. "If those kids can play like that, why worry about the Boston Symphony?" they were asking.

A Farmer's Diary

Sling Shots

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I THOUGHT I had a spare used inner tube, stored in our cellar. When I took it out, a few days ago, it was deflated and so deeply checked in many places as to be useless. I wondered, aloud, dejectedly, at supper, how I would get along without it.

The oldest boys chorused "Dad, if you can't use it, will you let us have it?"

"What for?"

"Slingshots!"

I should have given the tube to win the war—I know it now. But slingshots seemed a harmless sort of artillery—and boys must be doing something. Besides there is pleasure in seeing four small brothers with their heads together, making something. So I acquiesced with a nod. Things haven't been the same since.

Next day I was working on the hill, among the little trees when I heard some sharp quick movements in the tall grass, just a few feet away. Hard missiles were coming across the gravel road. I stretched up to look—nobody in sight. I went back to work. A stone clanged against my scythe—I heard a distant, triumphant whoop.

Finally I discovered some youthful hands, two lines the color of my old inner tube, and a sturdy crotch bent dangerously back—all half concealed behind the lower branches of the maples. Occasionally I heard a swish and saw live green maple leaves drop mysteriously to the ground.

The cabbage in my garden was afflicted with cabbage worms. I went there, at dewy morning, to administer some table salt in each open heart. The earliest stalks already had finely formed heads but almost every big head had an injury near the center. I walked along, wondering, until I came to one that told the table. A small round stone the size of a robin's egg was still lodged in the side of the tenderest, most perfect head!

The boys were working interestedly in their pickle patch, so I did not disturb them. Without saying much, I took the head of cabbage into the kitchen, where their mother was working.

That evening, after chores, all four boys were at the pond with slingshots, shooting at frogs and dragon flies. Two laying hens had suddenly gone lame, for no reason at all. The metal vent on the chicken pen lost its weather cap—eaves spouting on both barn and house was badly dented. English sparrows, perched saucily atop the roof, were disturbed—fell struggling to the ground.

When the boys went to bed in the attic, small stones dropped from their pockets to the floor when they hung up their pants. Every where—in the tufts of the living room furniture, on the lawn, beneath the dining table—small trails of stones were evident.

But the climax came last night, I think, when my wife, going barefoot through the living room after lights were out, stepped on a sharp stone, and declared to small boys, their father, and the world that a woman can stand only so much!

has laid bare other vulnerable parts of his front in Europe in order to obtain success on the Soviet-German front."

Portents of an eventual United Nations victory included:

1. In London, Britons expressed belief that the Churchill-Stalin talks last week initiated a new phase of the war which would swing the Allies into a multi-front offensive to bring about Germany's downfall.

The London Daily Sketch said "The final decision must have been made" by Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin on the question of creating a second European front in 1942.

Churchill himself messaged Stalin, declaring:

"I am certain that our contact will play a useful part in furthering our cause."

2. U. S. Army headquarters disclosed that an American offensive to smash Nazi strongholds in Germany and conquered Europe has now been launched, with giant "flying fortress" planes delivering a successful all-American bombing attack yesterday on Rouen, France.

"This marks the real start of an ever-increasing American bombing offensive," said Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, commander of U. S. air forces in the European theater.

"We will bomb Germany as fast and as often as possible until we win the war."

Pilots returning from the raid said Rouen, German-occupied rail hub 87 miles northwest of Paris, was left shrouded by "a great pall of smoke and sand."

Other developments in the world-wide conflict included:

EUROPEAN AIR WAR—RAF bombers, attacking Hitler's reich for the eighth time this month, bombed the German war foundries city of Osnabrueck, the site of big steel works and one of the main rail outlets for the Nazi arsenals in the Ruhr valley.

"Material damage was done, and there were casualties among the civilian population," a German communique acknowledged.

German night raiders struck at targets on the English south coast and in southeast England.

BATTLE OF EGYPT—America's rising aerial might was reflected anew with the announcement that U. S. Army medium bombers had gone into action in the Middle East arena for the first time, scoring hits on Axis targets at Matruh, western Egypt.

U. S. Fliers In New Raids on Tobruk

CAIRO—(AP)—Middle east headquarters of the United States army air forces announced today another series of successful operations by heavy bombers against Tobruk and in the Mediterranean Aug. 14 and 15 and disclosed that for the first time American medium bombers had gone into action with a raid on Matruh.

The heavy bombers set fire to an Axis merchantman guarded by two destroyers, and hit Tobruk harbor installations and a wreck which was being used to moor torpedo-boats there.

"All our airplanes returned safely" from all missions, the American announcement said.

Scattered Disorders Reported In India

BOMBAY—(U.P.)—Scattered disorders and two more deaths were reported in Indian cities today, but there were no indications any rioting had reach last week's scale.

At Kumbhakonam, 175 miles south of Madras in the Madras presidency, a mob defying police orders, volleyed stones at authorities who came to disperse them, injuring the district magistrate and the district superintendent of police. When charges with the swinging clubs failed to scatter the crowd, the police finally were forced to fire, killing one and injuring four.

At Bangalore, capital of Mysore province, one was killed and 38 injured by police bullets when rioters, attempting to set the post office on fire, attacked police.

It was considered that the reserve force had long since gone into action, the dispatch said.

Dispatches from Adm. Ghormley's headquarters and from Pearl Harbor, headquarters of Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, continued to emphasize that big losses must be expected in such a battle and that the Japanese navy was unlikely to concede the United States a definite victory in the Solomons without a long and stubborn fight.

But to date there was no indication that the navy's losses had been even as great as the United States command had envisaged. On the contrary, it seemed likely that the final communique would show that losses had been below expectation.

Gen. MacArthur's communique today reported the first Japanese raid on Port Moresby, the Allied base in New Guinea 1,000 miles to the west of Tulagi, since July 24. Twenty-four enemy bombers attacked a Port Moresby airdrome and it was admitted that they caused damage and casualties.

In the Kokoda area of interior New Guinea, just across the Owen Stanley mountains 55 miles from New Guinea, strongly reinforced Japanese combat patrols had driven the Allied forces back toward the mountain heights, and it was not ruled out here that the enemy might try to storm the 8,000-foot pass leading down to the Port Moresby side.

In the northwestern zone, where the Japanese have a major base 500 miles from Darwin on the northern Australian coast, MacArthur's planes made their sixth attack in eight days on Timor island.

They bombed enemy troops and airplane dispositions and lines of communications.

The navy's communique issued at Washington yesterday brought to Australians, as to Americans, the first official word for days regarding the Solomons, and there was no word in it which did not add to belief that Japan had taken a serious blow not only to its prestige but to its entire position in the northeast Australian zone.

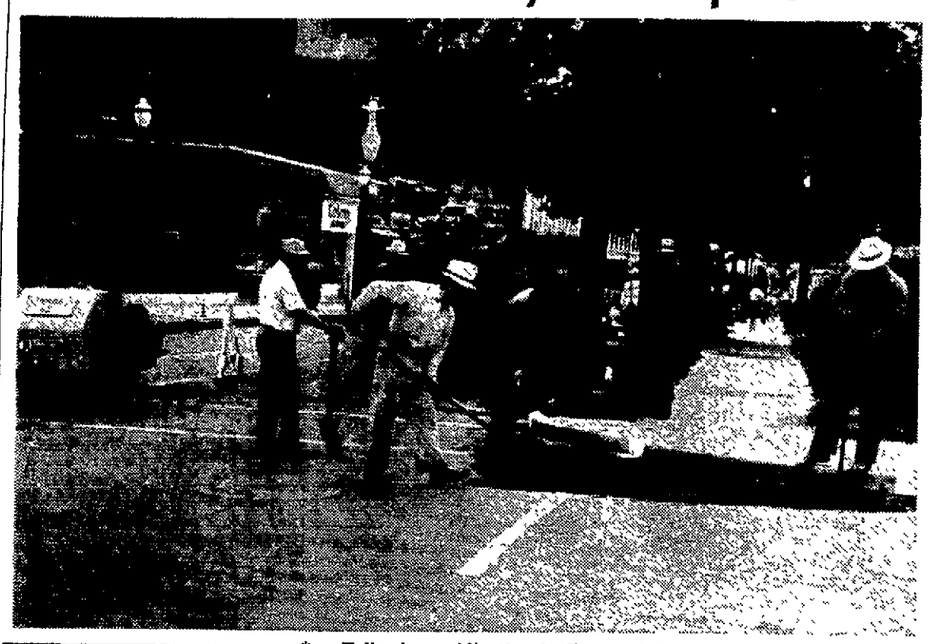
First the statement that transport-borne, amphibious marine forces had effected several landings on "island in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area" indicated clearly that one of the first marine objectives, and one which they had taken, was the Kukum airdrome base on the north shore of Guadalcanal island, on Lunga bay.

The communique confirmed that the attack was a complete surprise, that 18 enemy seaplanes had been destroyed before they could get into action, that several landings were effected, that vigorous enemy resistance was rapidly overcome and that a number of Japanese prisoners were taken. This was believed to indicate the big scale and complete success of the action.

It was understood that the first landing force had baby tanks and light field pieces.

The statement that navy fighters had succeeded in driving off enemy land based planes which attacked transport and cargo ships and their protecting cruisers and destroyers on the first two days was taken to mean that the great bulk of the United States attack force and equipment had got safe ashore.

Intersection Finally Gets Repairs



Following publication in Sunday's News-Journal of a dangerous hole in the paving at Mulberry and West Third streets, street department workers got busy yesterday and remedied the condition caused by asphalt being worn away from steel grating used as reinforcement. Workers also found another hazard to motorists near a curb at the same intersection and made repairs there, as shown in the above picture.

making his bed. He practiced making up his bed yesterday immediately after induction. How he did with the chore today, however, no one can say, because now he belongs to Uncle Sam, and for the next six weeks his life is a closed book.

When he has completed half of the 12-week course which leads to a commission as second lieutenant in the air corps, Gable will be permitted a token return to normal life and will be allowed to leave his hotel quarters on occasions to see a movie.

As an officer candidate, he is making $66 a month. As one of Hollywood's greatest stars, he was believed to have made $3,500 a week.

Gable was accepted as an officer candidate in the Miami Beach army air force school yesterday without fanfare. He and McIntyre slipped through Miami and entered the Vanderbilt hotel, headquarters of the officer candidate school, through the back door.

Previously Axis submarines had sunk 14 Brazilian ships totalling about 60,000 tons. But all these were fighters and most were engaged in international trade. The recent attacks were the first on passenger vessels operated on domestic shipping lanes.

while Reel was on board. Two ships, one a Jap transport, were sunk and the crew missed one target, a Jap tanker, which changed its course after the sub had let loose with a brace of four torpedoes.

Reel said that his underwater craft was dispatched to a Japanese-held island to pick up five United States fliers stranded there when their gasoline supply gave out. They took them off the island and Reel said he learned the fliers were bound for Corregidor but by the time they reached the fortress the Japs had already taken it. Forced to turn back, the plane's gas supply gave out before it was able to reach its base.

Another experience Reel vividly recalls was when his submarine came to surface and saw a Japanese ship burning.

"We didn't stay up long because right behind the burning ship was a Jap cruiser. It was only about 100 yards from us and we went under in a hurry. The cruiser passed right over our sub but we were deep enough to avoid a collision. The Japs evidently didn't see us."

Reel entered the navy in December, 1940. He attended Lexington high school and was active in athletic circles there. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Reel, Lexington R. D. 1.

Plans Three-Point Program To Avoid Outright Consumer Rations.

to civilians out of a record-high supply of 21,700,000,000 pounds of livestock raised for market this year.

"Consumer rationing would be a difficult job and would take at least three or four months to put into effect," one marketing expert said. "A system of allocation would be much more simple and could be put into effect quicker."

Meat Dealers Oppose Ration Proposals

CHICAGO —(U.P.)— Spokesmen for the nation's retail meat dealers, citing his year's bumper supply of livestock, today opposed proposals to ration meat.

John Kotal, secretary of the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers, said there "is no actual meat shortage."

Other spokesmen for the dealers, who are holding their annual convention here, said the association's resolution committee would submit to the 3,500 delegates a resolution opposing rationing.

Kotal made his statement after Roy F. Hendrickson, administrator of the agricultural marketing administration, told the delegates that meat rationing, preceded by "meatless days," was a probability.

Hendrickson said that despite this year's huge livestock production a 3,000,000,000 pound shortage of meat will develop in relation to the quantity civilian consumers will buy at ceiling prices.

SURVIVORS IN SEA 12 HOURS

Forced To Swim After Torpedo Smashes Lifeboat.

(By United Press)

Some survivors of a small British merchantman, sunk 30 miles off a Craibbean port July 8, swam for 12 hours before a British torpedo boat rescued them and 48 others who were fortunate enough to find lifeboat space, they reported today.

The sinking was the 449th reported by enemy action in the western Atlantic since mid-January when the Axis submarine campaign began.

The Axis submarine fired three torpedoes into the ship and some lifeboats were crushed by the explosions. Twenty seamen could find no boats and jumped into the ocean. Three Indian crew members were lost.

Offensive Against Axis on 'Multi-Front' Seen as Next War Move.

the final phase of the war which will see the decline and end of Germany's offensive power and the swift sequel of an Allied offensive."

The Times said the meeting "should ensure that any cobwebs which may have hitherto obscured corners of the military situation are swept away."

"We can be sure," said the News Chronicle, "that decisions of the conference have been made in the spirit to launch an all-out offensive against Germany as soon as circumstances permit."

Urges Allies Carry War to Germany

MOSCOW—(AP)—Russian publications suggested today that United Nations carry the war to Germany "with all their power and energy" and devoted front pages to the Kremlin conversations of Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

Photographs portrayed the British and Russian war leaders beaming at each other—Stalin in his usual khaki tunic and Churchill wearing a blue flying suit.

The government newspaper Izvestia italicized the phrase "with all their power and energy from the communique concerning the talks and asserted this peak effort was awaited by the great public masses of Britain and the United States.

Izvestia asserted that Adolf Hitler "already has laid bare other vulnerable parts of his front in Europe in order to obtain success on the Soviet-German front."

Izvestia said this had brought the war to the "decisive phase" with the Germans throwing their full might into an attempt to wrest victory before the United Nations' growing resources could tip the scales.

Washington Buzzes With 'Front' Rumors

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Official Washington remained silent today on the momentous Churchill-Harriman visit to Moscow, but this wartime capital buzzed with renewed rumors of a second front and other military decisions concerning the far-flung world battlefields.

Attending the conference, which was hailed as a possible "turning point" in the war, were:

British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, lend-lease expediter W. Averell Harriman representing President Roosevelt, Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, British commander-in-chief in India, and Maj. Gen. Russell P. Maxwell, United States commander in the middle east.

The presence of British and United States military commanders of the Near East gave rise to specultion that the conference dealt exhaustively with military steps to be taken in the event the Caucasus should fall to Germany, and the Nazi drive should spill over into Iran on the road to India.

With the revelation that Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, as well as President Roosevelt, were kept in daily touch with the conferences, it was believed that the concentration of Japanese troops on the Siberian-Manchurian border also received marked attention.

The terse joint Moscow-London announcement which declared that the conferences were carried on in an "atmosphere of complete cordiality and complete sincerity" was taken as an indication that Russian Premier Stalin had no thoughts of capitulating to Germany and negotiating a separate peace.

CITY'S LEGION POST PRAISED

Prompt Action to Scrap Gun Lauded; Mansfield Drive Opens Tomorrow.

in America will believe we mean business and will search her attic and basement eagerly. I believe the example of Mansfield and the Legion will create reactions that will be felt throughout the nation."

The German gun on the lawn at McVey post home will be cut to pieces with a torch Wednesday during ceremonies which will launch the War Production board scrap drive in Mansfield. Legionnaires have invited the public to participate in the ceremonies.

Meanwhile, the county salvage committee, headed by Carl L. Stough, went ahead today with plans for the scrap drive which will get under way in the city tomorrow.

Two bins were to be erected today or Wednesday morning at the west side of Central park to receive scrap materials, Stough said. One bin will be for metals and the other for old rubber, rags, burlap, and rope.

Stough urged residents of the city not to throw paper into either of the bins because of the danger of fire. Scrap paper, he said, should be turned over to the Boy Scouts, Volunteers of America, or Salvation Army, any of which will collect paper if notified where to call for it.

Meanwhile, Martin W. Coffey of Middletown, was elected to head the American Legion in Ohio for the next year.

Coffey, sales manager of the Philip Carey Co. and a participant in three major engagements in the first World war, was chosen unanimously at the 24th annual state convention of the Legion today.

He had been vice commander for the last year. In his new post he succeeds Floyd Harpence of Westerville.

Rossiter S. Williams of Oak Hill was elected vice commander and Charles McBride of West Salem was named treasurer.

Coffey is 46. He enlisted in the New York National Guard in 1916 and saw action with General John J. Pershing on the Mexican border. He went to France in 1917 with the 58th artillery and participated in the St. Mihiel, Argonne, Chateau Thierry engagements. Discharged in May, 1919, he became a charter member of New York city's Wilson Post of the Legion.

Chic Accessories Dramatize Black

Top, nailhead accessories trim black; left below, sterling silver mask pins dramatize black; right, silver and turquoise accessories with all-black.

By SUSAN BARDEN
International Illustrated News Writer

THE SIMPLE basic black dress, as stipulated by the War Production board requirements, can be made dramatic and fashionable with the co-ordination of accessories.

Smart accessories of quality that are pleasing in design, yet practical and functional as well, will do big things toward dressing up the plainest costume.

This type of style co-ordination, which consists of linking together various matched accessories, not only adds zest to the entire ensemble, but can make a basic frock serve triple duty.

For instance, the plain black frock that meets all the government rulings for spectator sports wear, is shown in one of the above photographs considerably perked up with a large bolster bag of black suede designed by Evans. It features nailhead trim, frame and bow-shaped clasp. Gold nailhead earrings match the bag trim. The hat, a Peg Fischer's creation, further emphasizes the importance of correctly combining accessories. It is a spectator sports hat with a chamois colored stitched felt brim, high quilted gray velveteen crown and long gray gauntlet velveteen gloves.

The same two designers have created accessories to use in changing the dress according to the occasion.

For dressy daytime wear the same basic frock is pictured with more formal accessories. It is accented with a sterling silver mask clip pin. The identical ornament is used on a black envelope bag and shows through the cut-out flap. A high gray velveteen stitched Shako has self material drapes that tie under the chin.

For afternoon and evening wear the same basic dress is fashionably co-ordinated by a sterling silver pin set with turquoise stones, to match the sterling accent of the black suede bag with scalloped envelope flap. A sleek black velvet cocktail hat, designed for the upswept hair, features a turn-back roll with black aigrettes on either side.

Shower Given By Mother To Honor Elizabeth Mike

At the home of Mrs. Steve Mike, 741 Bowman street, a personal shower was held Sunday for Miss Elizabeth Mike, bride-elect of Vincent Riley, jr., of Cleveland. They are to be married Aug. 29 at 10 o'clock in the St. Ignatius Catholic church there.

Thirty guests attended and during the evening various games were played with prizes being awarded to Mrs. Sam Williams and Miss Elsie Blank. A dinner was served with decorations for the long table in pastel shades and gladioli. A birthday cake was placed before Miss Mike, who was also celebrating her birthday.

At the close of the evening, Marie Lishing, cousin, and Betty Riley, niece of the prospective bridegroom, brought in many lovely gifts for the honoree. Mrs. Mike then presented her daughter with a gift of silverware.

Shelby Club Is Hostess To Navy Mothers Monday

Navy Mothers of Mansfield and other Richland county towns were entertained at Seltzer park in Shelby last evening by the Navy Mothers' club of Shelby. A two-course luncheon was enjoyed.

The program included accordion selections by Anna Lee Gray, vocal solos by Jane K. Gray and Betty Darrow, and reading of her original, patriotic essay by Velma Van Wagner. Mrs. Mary Dinges of Mansfield read a poem written by her son, who is in the navy.

Forty-six were present from Shiloh Shelby, Crestline and Mansfield. Mrs. Earl Brissell and Mrs. Clara Close were hostesses. A short business meeting was held. Next regular meeting of the Mansfield group will take place at the Central Methodist church on Aug. 31.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

When my father asks for an opinion he expects a prompt, direct answer, so I gave him mine in a voice far steadier than my nerves.

"I think it would be wise to let her come to New York, but to watch her every minute."

"Ronald wishes her, to come down here?" he countered.

"I do not think he really knows what he wants," I replied, "he is so torn between love for his sister and bitterness against her. But naturally he wishes to give her the benefit of every doubt."

"Where can we house her?" he asked, as if of himself. Then he went on, checking off his points with the fingers of one hand against the palm of the other.

"The hotel is impossible," he said. "Too many chances for her getting away, for she is shrewd and resourceful."

"And agile," I added, with a smile.

"I inferred that," he said with an answering smile. "And the hideaway is equally impossible. First, she must know nothing of its location. Second, you or Katharine would have to go down with her, and I do not wish that. Can you think of a suitable place for her while in the city?"

"It was Ronald's suggestion just now," I said slowly, "that Lillian was the one person in whom Carolyn might be persuaded to confide He says that Carolyn has always adored Marion's mother."

"I rather fancy that Lillian does not reciprocate the feeling," my father said dryly, "but she will play up, and I can see your idea. As it happens, just now it would be safe, and practicable, to have Katharine and Lillian exchange places again for a few days. I know where Ruth Hayes is and I can put a woman operative in this suit who can deal with her if she shows up while you're gone."

I wondered where I was going, but knew better than to voice the question.

Plans For Katharine.

"How much sleep has Katharine had?" he asked.

"Several hours, I fancy."

"I hope so," he said, "for I shall have to ask you to rouse her now and tell her to prepare for a short sojourn at the farm. I will send her out tonight, under guard, and Lillian and Miss Whitlock can return in the same car early tomorrow morning to the Underwood home, where they can prepare for Carolyn's sojourn there I fancy Miss Whitlock can be depended upon to put Carolyn in a strait jacket, if she needs such restraint.

"Richard and you — and yes, Ronald—will start for Wierhampton as soon as we can get a suitable car, driver and guard for you. Please pack immediately. I will go back and tell Ronald, then go to an outside telephone and notify Dicky to be ready for a destination unknown. He will know it as soon as I can see him."

"You will not go out alone," I protested.

Pretext for Journey.

"I never do in these strenuous days," he said. "On second thought I will go down to the hideaway to telephone Richard. I shall have to get some one in authority at Weirhampton out of bed, to arrange for Carolyn's leave of absence. But the federal service key unlocks all locks

"One point more. It will be necessary for the dean of women to give Carolyn some reason why she is to take the journey to New York What do you suggest?"

He was humoring me, I decided, as one pleases a small child by asking his advice, but I replied as if he really needed my counsel.

"You've read Carolyn's letter begging Ronald to arrange it so she could come down here," I said slowly. "Couldn't you have the dean say that her brother was coming for her?"

"Excellent," he said "And I'll leave it to Ronald's ingenuity to arrange things so his father and mother will suspect nothing. Now I must start for the hideaway, and you must awaken Katharine and tell her what is being planned."

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, August 19

ALTHOUGH the energies and faculties are under high stimuli for some very definite accomplishment on this day, yet there are signs of perplexity, vexation, frustration and perhaps turbulence and commotion as well This might be due to a high-tensioned state of nerves, mind and physical forces, which need restraint and proper direction as well as well-organized plans and techniques. Undercover help might be of benefit.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very lively and exciting year with all things accelerated to high pitch, although not always in the direction of desired objectives. There may be turbulence, irritations and defeats or impediments, with elders, superiors and those in high places not to be counted upon for cooperation. Self-sufficiency may be advisable or the indirect, secret or strategic collaboration of influential political or corporation friends.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY

Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

CORRECT YOUR ERRORS

Nobody plays bridge except plain, ordinary human beings. Consequently, no matter how brilliant they may be at times, all of them make some mistakes in any activity they essay. Bridge is largely a medium of enabling you to try to profit from your opponents' mistakes and attempt to keep the cost of your own errors at a minimum. Frequently we see both of these fundamentals in operation on the same deal.

At Table 2, where the bidding was conservative, only 4-Hearts got made, following a lead of the diamond 5, as one trick each was lost in diamonds, hearts and spades.

Did you ever see more terrifically optimistic bidding than North's 3-Hearts call at Table 1? That got his side into an impossible contract—that is, impossible except with some help by the opposition. Combining that with superlative effort on his own part enabled South to correct his side's bidding mistake.

The help from the opponents came in the opening lead of the spade 4, making the J a winner. The club 8 was led to the K, the heart 8 to the Q and A, the spade A cashed, the heart 10 led and overtaken by the J when West ducked, then the heart 6 to the K. West now returned the spade K, which South ruffed. The club A was taken, then South proceeded to squeeze East, counting on him for the minor suit honors after West had shown the major kings.

South's heart lead to the tenth trick was made when he held also his three diamonds. North the club 10 and three diamonds, one of which he discarded, and East the club Q and three diamonds. If East threw the club Q, the 10 would be set up So he tossed one of his diamonds, the 8, whereupon the A and K dropped the Q and J, giving the 9 the last trick.

AT LAST-HERE IS THAT Amazing New Kind Of Bread... "PATENTED FLAVOR" WONDER BREAD

Women Everywhere Are Quitting Old Kinds For It At The Rate Of 5,000 A Week Now

CHALK-WHITE
"REFINED" BREAD (UNENRICHED)
Bled chalk-white by refining, the flour used to make ordinary white bread is naturally deficient in vitamins and minerals. You can detect its inherent weakness by its chalk-white color and pallid flavor.

CREAM-WHITE
"PATENTED FLAVOR" NEW WONDER BREAD
Made by the Earle Patented Process, the flour in this new "Patented Flavor" Wonder Bread contains more natural vitamins and minerals than ever before Prove it is better; see its cream color and richer flavor.

Only Wonder Bread has "PATENTED FLAVOR"
Because Only Wonder Bread Is Made This Way From Earle Patented Process Flour
(U.S. Pat. Nos. 2143306, 2232697, 2155219, 2232696)

Get New "Patented Flavor" Wonder Bread Today; Put On Your Table And Into Lunch Box

Takes The Place Of Any White Bread Deficient In Natural Flavor, Vitamins And Minerals Because It Contains More Natural Flavor, Wheat Vitamins And Minerals

AT LAST! At your grocer's today the new kind of bread you have heard so much about. The "patented flavor" bread which already has taken the place of ordinary kinds in over 540,000 American homes:

1. Because it brings more of the rich, natural flavor of wheat full-ripened in the sun than white bread robbed of Nature's bounty. Thus, is better for taste.
2. Because it contains more natural vitamins and minerals of wheat now than ever before thought possible.

You can see the difference at once. Gone is the chalk-white look of the ordinary baker's bread. Instead, this new "patented flavor" kind has the color of the cream on the top of the bottle of milk.

A Remarkable Discovery

Everybody knows the trouble with ordinary white bread. Made from flour bled white in refining to make a whiter loaf. Then Theodore Earle patented his discovery (U. S. Pat. Nos. 2143306, 2232697, 2155219, 2232696). And here is the secret of "patented flavor."

By removing the bad-tasting outer skin of the grain, you get this richer, better tasting loaf. A bread the color of cream; tender in texture and crust. And with more natural vitamins and minerals.

To obtain this amazing new "patented flavor" loaf—ask your grocer for the new Wonder Bread. And see for yourself why women everywhere are quitting ordinary white bread for this new kind at the rate of over 5,000 a week now.

A Great Thrill

Here's none of the flat, insipid flavor of the usual chalk-white kind. But refreshingly different! Like the taste of fresh fruit after canned. You'll say it's marvelous!

Then, too, "patented flavor" Wonder Bread is doubly fresh—fresh when you buy it and fresh when you eat it. Because slo-baked for lasting freshness—baked 13% longer than many ordinary kinds. Thus, better for table, better for lunch box.

Ask your grocer for the new "patented flavor" Wonder Bread—today sure. You'll be glad you did!

CHAPTER I

If Amy Tudor, waiting in the Washington-Share-Expense-Auto-Travel-Agency, had been told that in a few months the big young man sitting next to her—the one with all the curly black hair—would be in uniform and that she would be running after him on a crowded city street she would not have believed it. And if she had been told that she would be begging him to speak to her she would have declared that was fantastic. But then, if she had been told that the attack on Pearl Harbor was going to happen she would have pronounced that fantastic too.

She was absorbed in her own little affairs that seemed so big to her then that she barely noticed the curly-haired young man. She sat very still beside him—a sleek tailored slip of a girl with brown eyes clear and shining like a small boy's and straight hair that rolled up at the ends in gleaming coppery scrolls.

She was not aware of Mr. Gore, manager of the travel agency, standing before her until he said, "Miss Tudor, they're ready to start now. I want you to meet the people you're to spend the night with."

She leaped to her feet then. So did the curly-haired young man. But Mr. Gore introduced the other woman of the party first.

"Miss Spires, meet Miss Tudor."

Miss Spires, a middle-aged woman whose sensible shoes contradicted her fuzzy permanent, gave Miss Tudor a half smile.

"And Mr. Bevan. Mr. Bevan is going to Cincinnati too."

Miss Spires' smile became a whole one now. For the curly-haired young man was the sort whom women of any age smile upon. He had amazingly blue eyes and little dents at the corners of his mouth that became dimples as he bowed to Amy.

"And this is your driver, Mr. McCloud, Mr. Gore went on. "Mr. McCloud is an attorney from Seattle. He makes this drive to Washington and back every fall and he always takes passengers for us. You can feel safe with him."

Tall gray-haired Mr. McCloud beamed upon his latest passengers. "Yes, my car's safe. Its exterior's a little shabby, but the engine's virtually new. I hope you'll be able to write back home that you had a pleasant journey. You live here in Washington, I take it"

The latest passenger's face went blank for a second. Then she said, "No, I—I guess I don't live anywhere."

Mr. McCloud looked concerned. So did Mr. Gore. And young Mr Bevan. But Miss Spires looked at the three men, then pressed her lips together knowingly as though she would say, "Never mind She'll get along, that one!"

Then Mr. Gore said, "Look here, folks, it's 3 o'clock. You ought to get started if you're going to get through the mountains before dark."

* * *

When they had stowed their luggage in the back of Mr. McCloud's car—Miss Spire's neat suitcase, Miss Tudor's smart light airplane bags, and Mr. Bevan's battered duffle bag pasted over with labels from Rome, Paris, Venice and Budapest—Mr. McCloud said, "Now, Miss Tudor, perhaps you'd like to sit in the front seat with me so that you can see the—"

But before he could finish young Mr. Bevan interrupted with a gay, quickly uttered "Here you go," ushered Miss Tudor into the back seat and climbed in beside her.

At first, riding through the city, the two on the back seat were a little stiff after the manner of new acquaintances when the first introductions are over.

Mr. Bevan looked at Miss Tudor out of the corner of his eye and then looked away quickly. But the girl wouldn't have seen him anyway. She was staring straight ahead—slim shoulders erect under the brown tailored jacket, hands clasped over her handbag. She was remembering that inside the bag was just $22 50

She knew because she'd had $22.50 before she'd paid Mr. Gore, as manager of the travel bureau, a dollar. She'd have to pay Mr. McCloud five dollars when he delivered her in Cincinnati and she would spend fifty cents for her dinner that night, and that would leave her just $16 02.

She had figured it all out carefully the night before when she'd planned the trip But she had a frantic desire now to take her purse out of the bag and count the money. Somehow she always felt that if she counted it there might be, by some miracle, more than she had realized.

And then she saw that they were rounding DuPont Circle Early autumn had tinged its great trees red and gold and brown Through drifting leaves she could see the sparkle of the fountain. An English nursemaid with a flowing veil held a child's hand as he walked around its rim A young couple strolled toward the curb, the man reading something from a small book, the girl laughing. A grey-headed man, distinguished, senatorial-looking, sat on a bench watching a fair-haired child playing in a sand box.

And then they were leaving it all behind, turning down Connecticut avenue. Suddenly the big sign on the Russian Troika blurred. The windows of the little shops blurred and the people on the sidewalk were walking in a mist.

She doubled her fists pugnaciously and dug her hands into her eyes like a small boy.

But when she dropped one hand into her lap again another hand closed over it and she looked up, startled, into the very blue eyes of the young man. He didn't look curious or prying. He just looked honestly understanding. And he didn't say, "Why you poor little thing!" That would have made her furious.

He removed his hand instantly and said as though nothing had happened, "This is quite an idea, this quite travel bureau, isn't it?"

"Yes," she stammered. "It—it saves money."

She could see his quick, incredulous glance at the good-looking bag and her real alligator shoes. And she bit her lip.

"I suppose we have hours of it ahead before we reach Cincinnati," she said.

Then just to make conversation he asked her whether she'd ever been in Cincinnati. She said no and he said, "It's my home town. You'll like it. It's like an old world city. Little cobblestone streets that ramble up hills then suddenly end just nowhere at all—in a little square maybe with a row of prim old houses and a lamp post or at the edge of a bluff with the Ohio river and half of Kentucky spread out far below you. Of course there are ultra modern skyscrapers downtown, towering over little green parks. And the old canal that once marked off the part they called 'over the Rhine' is now a boulevard And there are sweeping boulevards along the Ohio, and the parks—"

"That's wonderful, Mr. Bevan," Miss Spires had twisted around to face them over the top of the front seat. "You talk like a guide book."

The young man grinned impishly at the girl, but Miss Spires babbled on. "You make me want to stop off in Cincinnati myself. But I've got to get to St. Louis. I suppose you're visiting in Cincinnati, Miss Tudor."

"No," the girl said.

There was an awkward silence while Miss Spires waited for her to say something more. But she didn't, so Miss Spires went on, "But you live in Cincinnati, don't you, Mr Bevan?"

"Yes," he answered. "But I've been away for three years."

"In Europe?" cross-examined Miss Spires.

"Well, yes, until a year ago. I've spent this past year in Cuba experimenting with colors."

"Oh, you dye things. A laundry perhaps?"

"No, I'm an artist"

"Oh, an artist!" Miss Spires squealed. "I knew you were something! I had an aunt who painted china. She made me a vase with forget-me-nots all over it—simply all over it!"

The young man's black eyebrows drew together in a frown across the bridge of his handsome nose. "I paint in oils," he said crossly.

"And won't you be in the draft, young man?" Miss Spires wanted to know.

"Registered when I got off the boat," he said briefly. "But if anything really happens—to us, I mean I'll enlist. I saw a lot of things in Europe"

Miss Spires gave him no opportunity to say what he had seen in Europe. Her personally-conducted quiz ran on all through Maryland and into the mountains until, along about 9 o'clock, they stopped for supper in a little mountain town.

As they got out of the car in front of the stuffy-looking hotel Bevan bent over Amy, his face alight with mischief in the half light of the street lamp.

"Let's run away," he whispered. "What do you say to a supper date? . . . Oh, come on," he begged, holding out his hand.

"All right," she laughed, putting her hand in his.

"See you after supper," he called to Miss Spires and Mr. McCloud.

* * *

Presently the two of them were running hand in hand like two naughty children straight toward the mountain that rose at the end of the single, brightly-lighted business street. When they got there they found that the mountain wasn't at the end of the street after all.

Between it and the town was a vast, shadowy valley. At its edge was an electric sign commanding them to "EAT." And there was an ugly, clean little restaurant at the brink of the precipice.

The girl stopped beside a scrubbed-looking, oilcloth-covered table by the window. She took off her high feathered hat and shook the glossy brown hair back over her shoulders and pressed her face against the window glass, childlike, gazing down into the velvet blackness below.

"It's nice, isn't it?" she said "I like this sort of place much better than eating de luxe."

While a buxom waitress served them big bowls of country-style vegetable soup he said with his engaging smile. "And now, so that this won't be a blind date, I'll give you my first name. It's Paul."

"Mine's Amy," she told him. "Amy Upchurch Tudor."

"I like it," he said promptly. "Amy's such a spunky little name. And Upchurch. That says 'Old Southern family,' kinfolk all over the Carolinas and surrounding points. But you haven't an accent."

"I've lived in too many places," she explained. "In Paris and in Yugoslavia mostly. You see my father was with the department of state. Selby Tudor was his name."

A shadow fell over her bright young face. "He died six months ago."

"Oh, I see," he said awkwardly Then to fill up the little pause that followed, "And you've been staying in Washington?"

"Yes, so that I could take some civil service exams" She smiled wryly. "I didn't pass."

Then, as he looked questioning, "You see, my schooling wasn't very regular. When we lived in Paris I went to a French private school. I speak French—well, I suppose like a native. And then when we went to Prague my father taught me. My mother died when I was a baby."

There was no grief in her face when she spoke of her mother. But whenever she spoke of her father it was there, just under the surface.

"Dad taught me to appreciate Brahms and the Russian Ballet and Lafcadio Hearn and Gaugin. But I'm pretty low on arithmetic and spelling and geography. And those are the things that count in civil service But—"

The shining brown head went up. "I have a job in Cincinnati I'm to teach French in the Brendermier conservatory."

"In the what?"

"The Brendermier conservatory."

"There isn't such a school in Cincinnati."

Her eyes widened at that and the thick porcelain coffee cup shook in her hand.

"There must be! There has to be because I've invested everything I have in it."

"Just what do you mean when you say you've invested everything you had?" the man demanded.

"Just that," the girl declared with an attempt at airness. "Oh, it was just $300 and I have $21.52 left."

* * *

Bevan studied her across the oil-cloth-covered table. She was such a scrap of a thing, with her big eyes and long soft bob, to be sitting there in that bare little restaurant, defying the world with miles of dark mountain roads between her and anywhere.

"How did you happen to hear of this Brendermier conservatory?" he asked.

"Why, from the woman who's organizing it, Mrs. Minette Fowler."

He looked blank. "Never heard of her."

She seemed a bit worried now, but she went on, "She's a prominent Cincinnati woman. It's a new school. Mrs. Fowler's been traveling all over the country raising money for it. Of course my investment wasn't big, but it makes me a member of the board of directors as well as French teacher. The bigger investors are Cincinnatians. They feel there's a need—"

"In Cincinnati," he put in incredulously, "with two of the finest conservatories in the country? Where did you meet this Mrs. Fowler? I don't believe Cincinnati ever heard of her."

She blushed. "At a studio party. She's such an enthusiastic person. She has visions—"

"She must have," he said grimly. "I suppose she's to meet you in Cincinnati?"

"Well no—oo. I haven't heard from her lately. That's one reason I came on."

"Amy Tudor!" he exclaimed. "And you look, if ever a girl did, as though you knew your way around. You probably do. You probably know how to talk to diplomats over a dinner table and what to wear the first night out on an ocean liner. But when it comes to business or the seamy side of life you're a babe in the darkling woods. Look here I know it's none of my business—but why don't you go back to Washington? You're not so far away now and I'll stay with you until you've found a way to get back."

She shook her head so that her hair flew across her face. "Nope. You know, it's funny, but when you have plenty of money you don't mind parking yourself with your friends for any length of time. But when it's a matter of necessity you just can't!"

"But you must have relatives—"

She shook her head again. "In spite of the name—'good old southern family' as you put it—they all have to work for their money. Taking money people have worked for is like taking a slice of their lives."

"You're right," he said sharply.

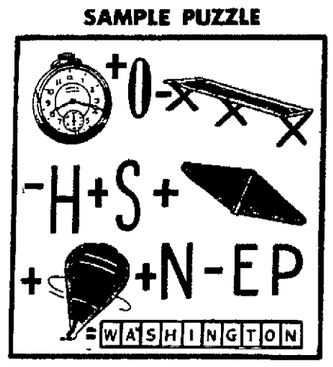
HOW TO SOLVE THE PUZZLES

(Be Sure to Read this Explanation Before You Try To Solve Puzzles 1-6)

SAMPLE PUZZLE



Note the Sample Puzzle above. It was purposely made easy to show you how to solve the puzzles. Notice that there are several objects illustrated and also that there are several plus and minus signs, which means that you add or subtract. Let's solve the puzzle together. The first object is a WATCH. Therefore, write down the letters W-A-T-C-H. Next you are told to add the letter O, and by so doing you have W-A-T-C-H-O. Then you see a minus sign followed by a COT, which means that you deduct the letters C-O-T. That leaves you W-A-H, from which you are then told to deduct H, leaving you W-A. Next you are told to add S and HINGE, giving you W-A-S-H-I-N-G-E. To that add TOP and the letter N, and you have W-A-S-H-I-N-G-E-T-O-P-N. Take away E P as directed, and you have the name of the Father of our Country, WASHINGTON.

Sport Podge

Football is in the air. It's getting in the papers all around and about, and in little more than a week the thud of the booted pig hide will be heard on various and sundry high school practice fields.

Schools that had spring practice must wait until Sept. 1 for fall drills, but those who passed up the spring sessions get a little earlier start.

Coach Nick Wasylik has called his Bucyrus Redmen to practice tomorrow, Tommy Thomas has issued his Mt. Vernon call for Aug. 24, Jimmy Lymper starts work at Galion on the 27th, and Tommy Bender holds a get-acquainted session with his new Shelby squad Thursday night.

In this section, Mansfield, Madison, Ashland, and Marion, where Vic Dorris, former Ohio State backfielder takes over the reins, begin practice Sept. 1.

So will most of Mansfield's opponents of the coming campaign, but Jim McDonald, who let his gridders rest last spring, starts practice at Springfield Thursday morning.

McDonald, former Ohio State and professional fullback star, will have 11 lettermen back from last year's strong team, after losing the same number. And among the returning lettermen will be the pass-slinging halfback Brooks Lawrence.

* * *

McDonald has scheduled morning and afternoon practice sessions every day until school opens. He expects to start out with conditioning exercises and signal drills on a few plays. It's reported Big Jim recently turned down a job as backfield coach of the Detroit Lions to stay at Springfield.

There's sad news from Canton for this year's Mansfield Tygers. McKinley lost big Tom Harris, line-crashing fullback, but the Bulldogs have had a star fullback dropped right in their laps.

Earl Loucks, jr., after two years of stellar play at Cuyahoga Falls, has transferred to McKinley, and is being counted on as a regular starter. He's reported to be a good kicker and passer in addition to taking care of the regular chores of his position.

And the great Jack Crider, who led Ohio scorers most of last season, will be back.

With 16 players lost "off the top" of last year's undefeated squad, Mansfield Tyger hopes for the coming season hardly will be based on monograms already earned.

Eight lettermen are back from last season, including Jim Burrage and Bill Lewis, ends, Bill Bermilin, tackle, Art Goettl and Gene Hetler, guards, Bill Snowden, center, Bill Boyce and Mike Sferro, backs.

Louie Nameth's return to the backfield after a season on the hospital list, plus some more or less experienced subs and reserves from last year and some very promising material coming in from the junior high schools, form the real basis for Mansfield hopes.

* * *

Mansfield fans can expect a good football team this fall, but only the most incurable optimist could expect another like that of 1941. Teams like that don't happen every day.

Series Grudge Blooms

Feud Between Yankees And Dodgers Fanned.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

IF THE New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers don't meet in the world series this fall, they'll waste a grudge that would be worth more at the box office than all the .300 hitters on both clubs.

Born in the post-season classic last October but lost amid the pennant squabbles of the current campaign, the ill-feeling has come out of retirement and shows signs of snowballing into quite a fuss.

* * *

The sudden reappearance can be traced directly to both teams' front offices, the occupants of which know how many customers a good grudge battle can pull through the gates.

It all came about when the Yankees discovered that their army-navy relief doubleheader with the Washington Senators at the stadium Sunday would have the toughest kind of competition at Ebbets Field.

When the Dodgers refused to strike one of their games off the day's calendar, Yankee officials were angered as well as embarrassed. Now the Yankee players are recalling the happenings of last October.

Among other things, they remember those close pitches so the feud is on again.

At Sunday's relief doubleheader, the one and only Babe Ruth will don a Yankee uniform once more.

Serving them up to the Babe in the added attraction between games will be Washington's superb hurler of former years, Walter Johnson.

Meanwhile, the St. Louis Cardinals aren't conceding the Dodgers the National league pennant. With Brooklyn idle yesterday, the Cards sliced the Dodger lead to seven and a half games by whipping the Cincinnati Reds, 5-2.

* * *

In the only other National league game, the New York Giants tightened their grip on third place, four games ahead of Cincinnati, by edging out the Boston Braves, 8-2.

The Yankees played their last game of the season in Philadelphia, swamping the Athletics, 15-0.

The St. Louis Browns came from behind twice to beat the Cleveland Indians, 5-2, in a night game, the only other contest on the schedule.

Blues Trail Birds By Half A Game

(By Associated Press)

Kansas City was only a half game behind league-leading Columbus today as the teams of the American Association prepared to go back to work stumbling over each other's toes in the championship drive.

In the only league game yesterday, the Blues brushed off Indianapolis 8 to 2. Columbus, not wanting to cool off, tangled in an exhibition with the Great Lakes Naval Training station team and handed Lieut. Mickey Cochrane's sailors a 5 to 4 defeat in 10 innings.

OLD-TIMERS MEET WESTINGHOUSE TEAM

Mansfield old-time softball players, strengthened by the addition of several still in action, will meet the Westinghouse city champions tomorrow evening at 6:15 at Johns park in a benefit game for Mansfield softball players now in action.

The old-timers practice this evening at 6:15 at Johns park.

Browns Gain On Indians

Mel Harder Hit By Drive From Gutteridge's Bat.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Cleveland's slumping Indians got a rest today and too much time to reflect on the batting woes that left them only one and half games ahead of the fourth-place St. Louis Browns.

It was the tough Browns who slashed the Tribe's third-place lead with a 5 to 2 victory last night.

* * *

Johnny Niggeling held the Tribe to seven hits and batted in the run breaking a 2-all tie in last night's contest, marked by the injury of Mel Harder.

Hit on the ankle by a smash from Don Gutteridge's bat in the sixth, Harder left the game at the end of the inning.

Judnich's circuit smash brought the loudest protest to the umpires, the Indians claiming it was a foul.

Cleveland opened the scoring in the first on a pass to Ken Keltner, who took third on Jeff Heath's single and scored on a passed ball. Successive singles by Judnich, Vern Stephens and George McQuinn tied it up in the second.

The Tribe went ahead in the third as Oris Hockett doubled and, after Roy Weatherly was retired, crossed the plate on Keltner's single. And again the Browns knotted it in the fourth with a run the Indians protested.

Stephens walked and, after one out, took third on Mike Chartak's single. Rick Ferrell bunted to Fleming, who fumbled momentarily and then threw to Gene Desautels. Stephens crossed the plate standing up and sprawled when he collided with Desautels' shoulder. The Brownies' shortstop was declared safe over Cleveland protests that he was more than five feet from the plate when Desautels detoured him.

Another St. Louis run in the eighth broke the tie and Judnich's homer following Harlond Clift's single clinched the game.

Stranahan Ties For Qualifier

CHICAGO—(INS)— Three veterans who tied for medalist honors lead the field today in the opening round of match play of the Chicago national amateur golf championships on the Knollwood club course.

Frank Stranahan, Toledo, O., 1941 runnerup; Wilford Wehrle, Racine, Wis., and Don Armstrong, Aurora, Ill., tied for the qualifying medal with two-under-par 71's.

Grouped a stroke behind the leaders in a three-way tie for fourth place were John Holmstrom, University of Illinois; Steve Kovach, Pennsylvania State amateur titlist from Pittsburgh and Mike Bencriscutto, Racine, with 72's.

Young Pitchers Click In Junior Loop

Tex Hughson — Hank Borowy — Phil Marchildon

Pitchers are having a big year in the majors this season with many new names among the starring hurlers. Three youngsters are burning up the American league with fine slab work despite some weak hitting behind them. Phil Marchildon, big Philadelphia Athletics' righthander, has won 14 games for a last-place club. Tex Hughson, Red Sox star, has won 14 and lost only three games. Hank Borowy, the Yankee righthander who hurled for Fordham university a couple of years back, has won 11 games against only two losses.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—The western division of the Army All-Star football squad is burned up over hints from the eastern camp that the other bunch is only a "second string" outfit. . . . Word from Camp Cooke is: "We play the toughest schedule—five games, starting with the Washington Redskins, to the east's three; we have less time to prepare; we travel the width of the country, which means the players get little between-game practice; we will draw more people and have bigger gate receipts. . . . In fact, there won't be any competition." . . . And if Col. Bob Neyland's boys want to challenge that, Johnny Kimbrough, Don Scott, Ralph Kercheval and company are perfectly willing to prove it on the field.

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE.

Ft. Worth is raising a "pennant fund" to reward Rogers Hornsby's Cats for staying up in the Texas league race. . . . And the fans are annoyed because the Rajah isn't eligible for the "most valuable" award.... Augie Nordone sprained his wrist during the first round of the Rochester Open golf tourney last week but turned in a 71, playing the last three holes with one hand only four under par.

At the Theaters

Name Bands.

The development of popular music from jungle rhythms to "boogie-woogie" is built into the gripping drama of "Syncopation," the picture opening Wednesday at the Ohio and featuring some of the biggest name bands in the business including Benny Goodman and Alvino Rey. Adolphe Menjou, Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville head the cast that masses for the first time the band leaders that are the favorites of millions. Menjou plays a southerner who goes to Chicago to seek his fortune and Miss Granville is cast as his daughter, a crusader for freer rhythms in the dance field.

Spy Drama.

Freddy Martin's band and the glittering back-drop of Manhattan's night life provide the accompaniment to battering fists and the head-on clash of primeval passions in "The Mayor of 44th Street," opening Wednesday at the Madison. George Murphy and Anne Shirley are featured in the picture that deals with a young man's struggle to overcome terrific odds. "Powder Town," the second attraction, presents Victor McLaglen and June Havoc in a story that reveals the operations of a mob of enemy agents within a munitions plant.

Family Story.

Average American family life and the troubles of newlyweds combine to make a merry mixture of comedy, romance and human interest in "This Time For Keeps," the Ritz attraction starting tomorrow. Ann Rutherford and Robert Sterling portray the young couple whose tribulations start when the bridegroom fails to notice his wife's first new hat after their marriage. Irene Rich and Guy Kibbee are among the players. "Unseen Enemy," the co-feature, presents Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine in a story of counter-espionage.

Spectacular Fight.

The spectacular fist fight that makes Rex Beach's "The Spoilers," a memorable event again furnishes the climactic note in the current film attraction at the Park. Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne and Randolph Scott are featured in the production that deals with the struggle of two men in the Alaskan gold fields to possess a beautiful woman. Richard Barthelmess and Harry Carey are also in the cast. "Hello Annapolis," the second film, features Tom Bown and Jean Parker.

BUZZ WETZEL GETS FURLOUGH FROM NAVY

Damon (Buzz) Wetzel, former business manager of the Mansfield Braves in the Ohio State league, is home on furlough this week in Cleveland from the staff of Commander Gene Tunney's physical instructors school at Norfolk, Va.

Wetzel, son of the elder Buzz Wetzel, head of the Cleveland Indians' farm system, and a former Ohio State football star, spent one summer in Mansfield with the Braves.

Fistic Fans Receive Tip

More Shows Planned If Bouts Prove Success.

Junior Association of Commerce officials were getting things squared away today for tomorrow night's fight card at the armory, first professional boxing show in Mansfield in over a year. And they announced that if tomorrow night's show proves anything of a success at the gate, they'll stage another inside of six weeks.

It's a tip to the fans that if they want boxing continued in this one-time hot bed of the fistic sport, they'll have to support it at the beginning.

Paul Carbetta, Mansfield's flyweight champion of the Cleveland Golden Gloves a year ago, now grown into a featherweight, is booked in the top 10-rounder, meeting Carl Netzel, 122-pounder from New York state, now fighting out of Cleveland.

Carbetta will be making his third professional start, after two victories, while Netzel has seven wins in nine pro fights. In amateur ranks, Netzel had a record of 96 victories in 102 fights.

Four-round prelims will send Howard Hodges of Marion against Dan Matthews of Colum; Kenny Krupp, Mansfield high football and basketball star, against Herm Shocker, veteran Mansfield amateur; and Lee Bridges, Mansfield, against John L. Frazier, Mansfield.

Another four-rounder is in the process of match-making.

ENTERS TOURNEY

BUCYRUS — Kenneth Gravelle, holder of the 1941 President's cup and champion of Bucyrus Country club golfers last year, is entered in the Ohio open golf championship play which started today at Mayfield Country club at Cleveland. Gravelle is believed to be the first local entrant ever entered in the Ohio open.

Forty Tennis Entries Filed

Tournament Pairings Announced Wednesday.

Efforts of the News-Journal and Mansfield racquet swingers to keep tennis alive here in the absence of stars now in service or war work, appeared to have met with some success today.

* * *

Although entires in the annual News-Journal court tournament closed last night, those placed in the mail last night and received today were still being accepted.

* * *

At last count this morning 40 entries had been received, distributed over five divisions, with the men's singles coming nearest to a full tournament draw for first round of play.

Pairings for the tournament will be made this afternoon, and will be announced in Wednesday's paper in time to complete the first round over the coming week-end.

Downswing of Business Loans Broken; Retail Selling Equals Last Year.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — The direction continued moderately upward in today's early stock market proceedings.

Fractionally higher at a quiet opening were U. S. Steel, Anaconda, Pennsylvania, Goodrich, and Allied Chemical.

Financial analysts discerned a constructive indicator in the Federal Reserve compilation disclosing a break in the lengthy downturn of business lending.

Notice was taken of the census bureau survey estimating sales of independent retailers throughout the nation in July were about equal with the comparable 1941 month but 5 per cent below those of June.

PATROL ARRESTS EIGHT DRIVERS

Two Motorists Face Charges After Accidents; Shiloh Man Fined.

Eight drivers were arrested by state highway patrolmen on a variety of traffic violations as weekend motorists thronged Mansfield area highways. Two of the drivers were arrested on charges growing out of one accident.

Pleading guilty to leaving the scene of an accident, Ollie E. Wagers, 26, of Shiloh R. D. 3 was fined $20 and costs in municipal court and his operator's license was suspended for one year. Patrolmen said Wagers had hit a parked car belonging to Glen Grimwood, 42, of Shiloh on State Route 178 early Sunday morning and failed to stop.

Grimwood, who was parked on the left side of the road, was also arrested by patrolmen and charged with parking on the wrong side of the highway. Also appearing in municipal court, Grimwood pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs.

Leland R. Conroy, 38, of 175 West Dickson avenue, was fined $50 and costs and his driver's license was suspended for one year after pleading guilty to a charge of driving while intoxicated. He was arrested by patrolmen on U. S. Route 42 Saturday night.

Arrested for speeding on Route 42, Russ Pennington, 41, of Akron, posted $16.30 bond Saturday night and waived appearance in municipal court today.

Both charged with illegally crossing a yellow line on U. S. Route 30-S Sunday night, two other motorists were cited into municipal court next Friday. They were Clifford L. Bennett, 21, of 245 Clairmont avenue and Leslie W. Tucker, 28, of Bellville R. D. 1.

Robert H. Rosenberger, 18, of Crestline was cited to appear in Mayor W. C. Morris' court at Shelby next Monday on a charge of unsafe operation. He was arrested on State Route 61 last night.
